A REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

Resolved. That many of the industries of this country have outgrown their infancy the food trusts should make exerbitant profits and pay millions in divinopolists. They can only see and feel that the Dingley tariff is a mighty good thing for the trusts and a mighty bad thing for the people. Nor is there any popular apprehennion of American trade being injured by a revision of the tariff. American merchants and manufacturers are un derselling their competitors in all th markets of the world. They are more than equal to holding their own in American markets. They can, without the slightest danger of loss, do without the "protection" of a tariff whose duties are necessarily paid by Amer can commers. They are very sure that business will be healthier when a healthy competition is possible and when individual enterprise and the conduct of smaller business concerns stand some show of profit. There is to prosperity for the people in the fact that a few hundred trust magnates, out of a population of nearly so.000,000 souls, make fortunes every year and proceed to spend the bulk of those fortunes in foreign lands. That form of "tariff-mashing" which would revise the Dingley tariff to the wholesome basis of a tariff for revenue only is heartily favored by American public sentiment. This sentiment is so strong, indeed, as to make tariff reform the leading frame of the day. Republican organs can no longer frighten American voters by calling them "tariff-smashers" and "business The only business to be killers." killed is the monopoly business, and the only tariff to be smashed is the unjust Dingley tariff that has created and maintained the monopoly busines at the sore cost of the people.

- Senator Hanna's declaration that there are no monopolies save those which are protected by patents invites research. Possibly he does not include the beef packing industry among monopolies, and perhaps, again, the pro-prietors of the slaughter-houses have found some means of copyrighting for argent revision.
